l'auteur I was born in Geneva, Switzerland, on a late Sunday night, back in the middle of June 1975. My whole life I was always drawn to imagining stories. But it took me a while to do something about it. After sinking my teeth into video games, different artwork endeavors and even manga: I somewhat realized along the way that the best medium to express myself was simply the written word. I've always been fascinated with the stars and Science Fiction in general. A lover of classics (Star Wars, Star Trek, Babylon 5, Stargate,...), it was a no brainer when it came to choose a context in which to tell my stories. I also have fond memories of playing games like Wing Commander as a teenager, a fact that should be apparent in my depicting of dogfight scenes. I also write about what I think are important issues in our current civilization. Sure I might oversimplify it sometimes and paint a positive and utopian picture of what things could be if we woke up as human beings. If we put the humanity back into the equation. Not realistic? Perhaps... But I like to make you think, to ask yourself what if? What if we did things differently? What if we challenged the beliefs that were formatted in our brains as children, and try to envision something else for our future? But I won't imply I am right with my questioning. I just have these questions and I like to share them with the readers, see if it tickles their minds like it tickles mine. But in the end I write, first and foremost, to entertain. So for a little while you can be transported to a different world, and hope you enjoy the ride Thank you for reading my books.
